Procurement Reform Survey

In early 2021 we conducted a survey to gather feedback on the procurement reforms proposed in the UK Government's Transforming Public Procurement Green Paper. This was part of our strategy to feed into the Green Paper consultation.

At that point only around a third of respondents had heard of the Green Paper, a document that is the basis for the procurement reform legislation and which is currently making its way through the House of Lords.

Now two years on from the Green Paper, we've had the National Procurement Policy Statement and the Procurement Bill that provide more detail, building on the initial proposals.

Through the survey we're trying to determine whether levels of awareness have risen; and, whether:

- there's support for the reduction in the number of procurement procedures;
- the increase in flexibility around the procurement procedures will allow buyers more freedom to tailor procurement processes to their needs, or will this lead

- to more challenges to public procurement processes;
- the single digital platform will help prevent duplication of effort around supplier selection as intended;
- the changes to Dynamic Purchasing Systems and Frameworks will make them more useful, and more used; and,
- the Procurement Pipelines and further proposed transparency via the Central Digital Platform will be beneficial to the public procurement marketplace.

Help us to understand what these reforms mean for you and let us know if you're ready for the changes.

Our survey will take just a few minutes to complete and as a participant you will receive an exclusive first look at the findings once they're published in the New Year.

Online Supplier Events

To join us on this journey we have a programme of Online Supplier Events that focus on the impacts for suppliers ahead of the changes coming into force. They will deliver actionable insights and allow for effective preparation, helping to mitigate the risks and increase the opportunities that will come with the reforms. Our speakers include key stakeholders from the Cabinet Office, CBI and Places for People who will provide complementary perspectives on the challenges and opportunities ahead.
